

Is it time for a Coupa tune up?

Coupa is the tool in the source-to-pay (S2P) toolbox, spanning every business activity from initial supplier research and negotiations to invoicing and final payment for goods received. Now that Coupa is engrained in your organization, why not take a fresh look and see where thoughtful calibration can get you even more ROI?

As your organization grows and evolves, so do your processes—and not always for the better. Regular reviews should happen, and any manual processes weeded out. They can create an array of tactical issues and reduce visibility into spend and performance. Fraud, overpayments, and operational waste are tougher to spot and address too. ClearSulting can help.

Our focus

Eliminate unnecessary steps, optimize the ones you need, and automate where possible. Here's what that looks like:

- Defining a future state vision for your source-to-pay organization
- Reviewing and cleaning up master data—including your suppliers
- Developing and executing a supplier enablement strategy
- Designing and implementing catalogs
- Optimizing integrations
- Streamlining the end-user experience with training and support
- Using data and analytics to make forward-looking decisions quickly and efficiently

A track record that doesn't miss

An organization previously implemented Coupa to streamline its procurement process. But despite investing significant time and resources, managing spend was still a challenge. Worst of all, invoicing was manual—causing delays, errors, missed payment deadlines, and strained relationships with suppliers.

That's where we came in. After a thorough current-state assessment and cross-team collaboration, we helped automate the organization's invoicing process, implement best practices for approval workflows, and optimize and track payments. And when the project was all said and done, we provided ongoing support for a more seamless transition to Coupa.

The result?

50% improvement in invoice automation

32% increase in on-time payments

Happy suppliers and cost savings from better negotiating power
